The process of writing is quite solitary, but the process of finding an audience for your writing requires reaching out - convincing someone else that what you have written is worth reading. Here are a few tips and resources to help you improve your writing, discover your voice and find an audience.

ASK AND LEARN

Most authors have websites with email addresses. Many authors, especially those who write for children and teens, respond personally. Ask how they started to publish their writing, where they get their ideas, how to solve a particular problem in your own writing, if they offer writing workshops for young people. In the Washington area, you can find many children's authors on the website for the Children's Book Guild of Washington, D.C., as well as advice for aspiring authors and illustrators.

SUBMISSIONS TO MAGAZINES AND CONTESTS

Click publication to learn more.

- The Apprentice Writer – Publishes fiction, poetry, personal essay, memoir, and photography; grades 9-12
- B'nai B'rith International – Diverse Minds Writing Contest; grades 9-12
- Cicada – Submissions, tips and resources. Ages 14+
- F. Scott Fitzgerald Festival – Short Story Contest
- Imagine – Information and inspiration to make the most of your pre-college years. Grades 7-12
- Maryland Humanities – Letters About Literature Writing Contest
- New Moon – Ad-free magazine for girls. Ages 8+
- NANOWRIMO Young Writers Program
- One Teen Story – Literary magazine for YA readers
  - One Teen Story Teen Writing Contest (accepting unpublished submissions Sept 1 - May 31)
- Potluck – Diverse collection of creative media. All ages
- Stone Soup – Print magazine written and illustrated by young writers and artists. Ages 8-13
- Teen Ink – National teen magazine, book series, and website devoted entirely to teenage writing, art, photos, and forums. Ages 13-19
- The Writer's Slate – Original poetry & prose. Grades K-12
- YARN – Literary journal by and for YA readers.
  - Find out about YARN's young editors and interns
- Write the World – A community of young writers hailing from over 120 countries. Ages 13-18
Montgomery County Public Libraries Teen Site

Friends of the Library Montgomery County Student Board Member – Open to incoming 11th graders

Local Book Festivals (often have writing contests) –
- Gaithersburg Book Festival
- Baltimore Book Festival
- Bethesda Literary Festival
- College Park Arts Exchange
- F. Scott Fitzgerald Literary Festival
- Gaithersburg Book Festival
- National Book Festival
- Virginia Festival of the Book

Maryland Humanities –
- Maryland Center for the Book
- Letters About Literature Writing Contest

Maryland Writer’s Association –
- Writing Contests
- Writer’s Resources

Young Authors Guide – Contests, magazines, tips.

Pencil Tips Writing Workshop – Writing tips, resources, strategies, practice activities.

Noodle Tools – Online tools for young writers.

This Is Not a Writing Manual – A young adult writing memoir by Kerri Majors, YARN founder/editor. ISBN 978-1599636887

Hunger Mountain – Vermont College of Fine Arts Journal of the Arts.

StudioPAUSE – Creative workshops in Arlington; founded by Sushmita Mazumdar

PROGRAMS/CLASSES FOR YOUNG WRITERS

Click resource to learn more.

Duke University Young Writers’ Camp

Johns Hopkins Center for Talented Youth (CTY) – Preparing students to make significant contributions. Open to all grades. Resources, programs, courses,
- JHU CTY Imagine Magazine

Summer Writing Programs

Susquehanna University Summer Advanced Writers Workshop

The Writer’s Center – Workshops, classes, poetry journal (Poet Lore)
- Program Calendar

Writopia – Creative writing workshops. Ages 6-18

CELEBRATING POETRY

Click resource to learn more.

Split this Rock – Cultivates, teaches, and celebrates poetry that bears witness to injustice and provokes social change

Power Poetry –
- How to Enter a Power Poetry Poetry Slam

Compiled by Karen Leggett Abouraya with support from Valerie Tripp, Frances Frost, and Melissa McDonald.

Contact Lysette House at 240-777-0020 or lhouse@folmc.org for an electronic version.